of the principle of "Accountability for all". The report had said, "The transparency of its (NAB's) prosecution has increasingly been called to question being selective as the excesses of the military and the judiciary have been by and large ignored by the Bureau." The Senate Committee, whose report was unanimously adopted by the Senate had insisted, "In some isolated cases, the Bureau's investigation methods have also been reported in the national press as violation of the standard human rights norms. These perceptions need to be rectified, if the accountability process is to gain credibility and transparency."

The issue of "Corruption in Federal Government Departments" was raised in the Senate and referred to the Committee in May 2015. As reported earlier by The News, the Committee held various meetings and had come up with the report, which had the following salient features.

- NAB and FIA have overlapping jurisdictions. Neither the NAB Ordinance 1999 nor FIA Act 1974 draws a clear distinction between the mandate and jurisdiction of these two institutions. Therefore, the NAB and FIA laws should be reviewed on priority basis to clear ambiguities and ensure smooth mechanism for co-ordinated working of both the institutions.
- Single anti-corruption agency may be created at the federal level with administrative and financial autonomy. Such an agency should be protected from political influence.
- There should be an Accountability system for all in which the accountability agency enjoys political and operational independence to investigate even the highest levels of political and bureaucratic functionaries. This system must exercise its powers in conformity with the international human rights norms and be accountable to the law of the land. The NAB, which has been entrusted with the task of investigating and prosecuting corruption, falls short of the above criterion to some extent. The transparency of its (NAB's) prosecution has increasingly been called to question for being selective as the excesses of the military and the judiciary have been by and large ignored.

ecution has increasingly been called to question for being selective as the excesses of the military and the judiciary have been by and large, been ignored by the Bureau. In some isolated cases, the Bureau's investigation methods have also been reported in the national press as a violation of the standard human rights norms. These perceptions need to be rectified, if the accountability process is to gain credibility and transparency.

- Proper legislation regarding Whistle Blower and Right to Information needs to be done because there is a broad consensus on the importance of these laws in enhancing transparency and accountability, which is important to reduce opportunities for corruption.
- Setting up of IT-based One Window Operation system in all federal government departments should be ensured to make the service delivery process transparent and convenient to the general public.
- Mass media campaigns should be run for public awareness in fight against corruption.
- Curbing the tendency of extra secrecy and classifications of government documents, decisions and policies.
- Introduction of the mechanism of time limits for service delivery for government departments which are responsible for provision of services and utilities to the public.
- Establishment of vigilance units within government departments. - Cabinet secretariat, Establishment Division and Finance Division should carry out comprehensive civil service reforms to have a motivated, performance driven and professional civil service.

to have a motivated, performance driven and professional civil service.

that the Constitution has no such provision, he said. The provinces have been denied the new National Finance Commission award for the last three years and the new award looks unlikely in the near future, he said. The Senate chairman said the provincial budgets were curtailed during the era of General (ret'd) Pervez Musharraf despite that out of 14 points of Quaid-e-Azam, four were related to provincial autonomy. He said the teachings of Quaid-e-Azam are not being remembered as the Founder of the Nation had given the message of Faith to the countrymen. He said an amendment had been inserted in Article 6 of the Constitution to block martial laws in future. The Senate chairman said the state would face grave consequences if any attempt is made to do away with the 18th Amendment. He said no society could survive without accountability and added the Senators would go through the process of accountability. He said two days ago a committee was formed by the Senate to conduct accountability where the senators would present themselves for accountability. He said Pervez Musharraf escaped from the country and it is unfortunate that the state could not pursue the case against the former military ruler. He said the army achieved major successes against non-state actors. He said the school going children were not being taught history in the right manner as they were being motivated to wage war. Arab culture is not Islamic hence it could not be introduced here in Pakistan, he said. He said there is nothing wrong if Punjab wants to make Bhagat Singh part of the curriculum as he had struggled against the British colonial rulers.
